Setback from Rt.235 within security fencing at Pax River NAS, Quarters D is a mid to late nineteenth century frame I house that was acquired by the Navy in 1942 as they built the naval air station. Measuring three bays wide and one bay deep, the two a half story dwelling is a vernacular building with limited ornamentation. A gable roof with a typical cross gable is imitated by the one story porch with central gable. A nineteenth century two story addition creates the current L-shaped configuration. The Navy has highlighted the poor integrity of the structure in their documentation. The twin central chimneys were removed, the house covered in synthetic siding and the tin roof replaced with asphalt shingle, porches have been enclosed and shutters removed. Upon the Navy's acquisition, the barn and outbuildings were demolished. The interior of the dwelling exhibits a central hall plan with an unusual diamond newel. Original wood flooring has been replaced. Extreme moisture problems have resulted from a filled in foundation causing rampant mildew in this vacant building. I concur that this common building type exists throughout Maryland, many exist with higher levels of integrity. Therefore, I agreed with the Navy that Quarters D is not eligible for the National Register.
